NEW YORK, Oct. 4—Al Smith, who rose from the Fulton fish market on New York's lower east side to run for the nation's highest office died today at Rockefeller Institute hospital. He was 70 years old.

Former governor of New York,
Mr. Smith had been ill since Aug.
10 and had been in critical condition for the last week. Last Sunday he received the apostolic benediction from Pope Pius XII and expressions of affection were conveyed to him in a cablegram from Archbishop Francis J. Spellman, now in Vatican City.

He had seemed to rally yesterday. Members of his family were permitted to pay him brief visits and his physician, Dr. Raymond P.
Sullivan, had reported, "there is a slight improvement."

But his condition took a turn for the worse after midnight, and death came at 6:20 a. m.

"Happy Warrior"
The "Happy Warrior," whose brown derby and gay marching song, "The Sidewalks of New York," stirred millions to political battle, long ago had removed himself from partisan politics and retired to the role of elder statesman.

One-time candidate for president and last Democratic nominee for that high office before Franklin
D. Roosevelt, Alfred Emanuel Smith was a direct contrast to his successor as the party's titular leader, born as he was in the humblest circumstances in New York's lower east side.

The son of Alfred Emanuel and Catherine Mulvihill Smith, the late ex-governor of New York state was born Dec. 30, 1873, in the shadow of the Brooklyn bridge in Manhattan's toughest neighborhood.

His father was an unsuccessful trucker who died when the young Smith was 13, forcing him to leave school when he was in the eighth grade, compelled to seek employment to support his mother and sister, Smith took whatever jobs he could, working for a time at his father's trucking business, later in the oil business and for seven years in the Fulton fish market.

Browns and Cardinals Open Epochal Event In History of Baseball

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 4—An epochal event in baseball history opened in St. Louis today when the city's representatives in the American and National leagues met in Sportsman's park in the first game of the 1944 World Series.

Some 35,000 fans were on hand when for the first time in baseball history the two city rivals engaged each other in the Fall classic.

The Browns, who have never before finished first in the American league, were considered the "hotter" team of the two, but the Cards had the backing of the money boys. Betting odds of one to two favored the National league champions to win the series, while the bookmakers offered 11 to 20 that the Red Birds would win the opening game.

"Cooler and no rain" was the forecast for this afternoon when at 2 o'clock Ziggy Sears, National league umpire working home plate, calls "batter up," and Mort Cooper of the Cards began his windup.

Cooper has a record of 22 games won and 7 lost in the regular season. Opposing him was Dennis Galehouse, a run of the mine Browns pitcher whose record was nine won and 10 lost.

Residents of St. Louis, who were apathetic about the series until the Browns captured the American league title in a sensational finish last Sunday, were aroused over the title fight. They figured that no matter which team won, St. Louis was to hold the World Series championship.

Philippines TO DECIDE WAR, JAP
ADMIRAL SAYS

By International News Service
The war in the Pacific will be decided in the forthcoming battle for the Philippines, Admiral Nobumasa Suetsugu, retired former commander-in-chief of the Japanese combined fleets, declared today.

Asserting that the war in the Pacific will be a long drawn-out affair, with no clash between the main strength of opposing fleets, but with repeated aerial battles, the Jap admiral said that American activities aimed at recapturing the Philippines "indicate that the most crucial point has been reached in the war situation, presaging the most important fighting."

The statement was made in an interview with the newspaper Mainichi.

The Philippines operation was described "not as a mere battle for the Philippines but one which will decide whether Japan can maintain or be cut off from her communications with the vital resources in the southern regions."

"For that reason the outcome of the Philippine operations will be of such a far-reaching nature as to decide the general war situation and I am certain it will be the greatest and most decisive battle fought," Suetsugu said.

"Al Smith had qualities of heart and mind and soul which not only endeared him to those who came under the spell of his dynamic presence in personal association but also made him the idol of the multitude," the statement said.

"To the populace he was a hero. Frank, friendly and warm hearted, honest as the noon day sun, he had the courage of his convictions, even when his espousal of unpopular causes invited the enmity of powerful adversaries."

"During his tenure as governor of the great state of New York, he attracted national attention by his skill as an administrator. It was a natural sequence that he should become the candidate of his party for the highest office in the land. In a bitter campaign, in which his opponent won, Al Smith made no compromise with honor, honesty or integrity. In his passing the country loses a true patriot."

The Philippines

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4—Momentous events were shaping up today in the war to crush Japan as the result of the timely meeting on the west coast between the navy's top-ranking strategists.

What may prove to be one of the most important war conferences to date took place in San Francisco with Admiral Ernest J. King, United States fleet chief and chief of naval operations, his staff and field commanders from the Pacific.

Present at the meeting were Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet chief, his staff members and Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal.

The Navy merely admitted that the conference was held and gave as reason that it was called to deal with "aspects of the campaign against Japan."

Big Blow Mapped

However, recent developments in the Pacific indicated that the Allies were mapping final plans for mighty new assaults which might carry them into the home stretch in the war, to bring the Pacific enemy to his knees as quickly as possible.

Conferences such as this have been held before and they usually have been followed by important moves within a comparatively short time.

News from the Southwest Pacific disclosed that the present phase of the Palau campaign was in the mopping-up stage, which (Continued on Page Two)

AIRLINE PLANS BIG PURCHASE OF ARMY PLANES

NEW YORK, Oct. 4—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, president and general manager of Eastern Airlines, disclosed today that his company plans to buy 25 million dollars' worth of twin-engine CW-20 Commando and four-engine DC-4 transport planes.

He said the new equipment would enable the company to expand mileage five-fold in a three-year domestic and international expansion.

The company's total expansion plans, Rickenbacker said, would provide jobs for thousands of returning service men.

Strike of Maintenance Men Gains Momentum In Detroit District

DETROIT, Oct. 4—Nearly 40,000 workers were idle in the Detroit area today as a strike of maintenance men gained momentum and hit the Ford Motor Company's Willow Run bomber plant, the Chrysler Corporation's Jefferson avenue plant, the De Soto Wyoming plant and the Briggs Manufacturing Company.

A strike of between 350 and 400 maintenance men closed the Chrysler and De Soto plants involving a total of 15,500 workers. At Briggs, the plant was almost completely shut down as a strike of between 600 and 700 maintenance men made 20,000 workers idle there.

Three hundred and two maintenance workers, including electricians, welders and the entire staff of crane operators were out at Willow Run and a company spokesman said workers would be sent home in an hour if the men do not return to work.

Union leaders met with National War Labor Board officials in Washington in an effort to avert a disastrous strike of 38,000 UAW-CIO maintenance workers involv-

DEWEY OFFERS CUT IN TAXES

GOP Nominee Aims Plan For Simplification Of National Levy Laws

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 4—Gov. Dewey resumed work on his West Virginia speech today after promising American tax payers that Republican victory will mean simplification of the nation's tax laws and drastic reduction or elimination of many existing levies.

The GOP presidential nominee, in a 15-minute nation-wide radio talk last night from the Albany executive mansion, outlined a tax relief program ranging from a slash in personal income taxes to a scrapping of most of the existing taxes.

He charged that the Roosevelt administration has failed to establish a tax policy which encourages business and job-making, and that "the highest New Dealers at last admit that this administration has created an impossible condition which urgently needs repair."

Gov. Dewey, declaring that taxes must be levied sensibly, with "understanding for the human needs of our people," proposed the following program, to take effect immediately after victory is won:

A change in personal exemptions so income taxes no longer will be taken from the pay envelope. (Continued on Page Two)

EARLY VICTORY CHANCES NOW BELOW 50-50

LONDON, Oct. 4—Chances that the war in Europe will end this year now are slightly less than 50-50, according to military opinion in London today.

The weather is seen as a fateful factor. If victory is to be attained this year it is believed the Allies must win the battle of the Rhine before the end of October.

RECONVERSION MACHINERY SET

President Signs Bills
But Voices Criticism
Of "Inadequacy"

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4—The framework of the government's reconversion machinery was in position today, needing only the appointment of operating personnel to complete the blueprint laid down eight months ago by Bernard M. Baruch for guiding the nation from war to peace.

In some respects the machinery differs from the recommendations of Baruch and in these instances President Roosevelt expressed disapproval, voicing the hope that so-called "deficiencies" will be promptly rectified when congress reconvenes after next month's election.

One of Mr. Roosevelt's major criticisms concerned provision for the human side of demobilization and it is understood that Baruch, world war industry board chairman, also is dissatisfied with legislative enactments to date in this field.

LONDON, Oct. 4—Nazi Field Marshal General Erwin Rommel, variously reported as seriously injured or killed in France, was said in a Stockholm dispatch to have been blinded as a result of head injuries.

The dispatch quoted a report in the Stockholm newspaper Tidningen which said that Rommel was injured in the Caen area and that it was doubtful whether an operation would save his sight.

Solons Voice Criticism Of Navy For Failure To Reveal Details

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4—Demands for a full investigation of the "battle of the Statler" were voiced on Capitol hill today in order to "place the responsibility where it belongs."

Congressmen still in Washington despite the election recess, voiced sharp criticism of the navy department for its failure to supply sailors overseas with news of a fight between members of the teamsters union and two naval officers, during which one of them "beat up a personal friend of the president."

The navy's reason for withholding the news from its personnel—that it was of a "political nature"—evoked particularly sharp reaction.

Entitled To Truth

"It is up to us on the home front to give overseas men good administration—and tell them the truth," declared Rep. Robert F. Jones (R) Ohio. "They are entitled to know the good and bad. This news should go overseas the same as any other."

By International News Service
Armored and infantry forces of the American First Army, battering their way forward through a gap punched in the Siegfried line, battled eastward today against stubborn Nazi opposition to seize positions 32 miles from the outskirts of Cologne.

An official spokesman at headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said that the advance through the German line north of Aachen was continuing but moving very slowly.

Yank progress was impeded because the troops commanded by Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges had to fight their way through well-fortified terrain where the Germans were strongly entrenched. The American advance was met by heavy artillery and mortar fire from German positions.

Below Ubach other First Army elements scored gains against tough Nazi opposition. American advances were recorded north of Kerkrade and north of Meeksteden.

Patton Takes Fort

Fighting savagely in a storm of shot and shell, General Patton's Third Army today held the three main corners of gigantic Fort Driant guarding the city of Metz and plunged into an extended attack against the central sector.

A spokesman at Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters said that Fort Driant had been captured after a heavy battle yesterday but this announcement apparently was premature.

The Germans opened up fierce mortar and artillery fire from Fort Mareville to the north of Driant as the Yanks fought it out with bayonet charges straight into the log and concrete reinforced entrenchments inside the garrison, taking numerous prisoners.

WIFE IN TEARS ASKS BREAK FOR OHIO FUGITIVE

CHICAGO, Oct. 4—Clayton Love, 34, who escaped from the Mansfield, O., reformatory seven years ago, was held by Chicago police today on a fugitive warrant as his wife tearfully pleaded for a break for him and "our sweet little family."

Love, a painter and decorator, was identified as an escaped convict when he placed his fingerprints on his application to city authorities for a license to operate a pawn shop.

Police made a routine check of the prints and identified him as a convicted robber who fled the reformatory in 1937.

The wife, Penny, 21, who married Love five years ago, termed him a "wonderful husband and good father" and declared he had gone straight and worked hard for her and their two sons, Clayton Jr., 3 and Eddie, 18 months. Another child is on the way.

DEWEY'S BLOWS AT PRESIDENT AROUSE WAGNER

NEW YORK, Oct. 4—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was accused today by Sen. Robert F. Wagner (D) N. Y., of seeking to disparage President Roosevelt's war-time achievements by promising, if elected, to abandon the role of commander-in-chief.

Wagner, opening his campaign for re-election to congress, declared the Republican presidential nominee in his acceptance speech "tried to make the job of president seem small enough for him to fill it."

city commissioner of jurors' office. This meant a salary of $800 a year and it was on these meager earnings that he was married in 1900 to Catherine A. Dunn, the beloved wife who shared more than four decades of political and social triumphs with him.

In 1903, Smith was elected to the New York state assembly on the Democratic ticket and served in that capacity until 1915. Although he had little formal education when he went to Albany, Smith's quick mind and his unusual knowledge of New York city and the district he represented made him a popular legislator. In 1911 he became Democratic leader of the assembly and in 1913 speaker. A position second only to that of governor in political importance.

Draws Criticism

Smith was attacked often in these days by "reform" leaders, who charged he was too much a "party man" to honestly represent his constituents. By 1911, however, he had proved himself so able and independent a thinker that he was named to a commission investigating factory conditions. In 1915 he was sent as delegate to the constitutional convention revising the state's constitution.

Between 1915 and 1918, Smith served successively as sheriff of New York county and president of the city board of aldermen. In 1918 he resigned the latter post to stand as Democratic candidate for governor of New York state.

Smith was governor of New York for four terms, a record that still stands. In 1918 he defeated the tremendously popular Charles S. Whitman by 14,000 votes and after a defeat in the Republican landslide of 1920, was returned to office in 1922 by a majority of nearly 400,000 votes. In the interim he was head of the U. S. Trucking Corp.

Defeats Roosevelt

In 1924 Smith was able to overcome the magic name of Theodore Roosevelt, son of the Republican president, to be re-elected by 100,000 votes, and again in 1926 he was returned to office, this time defeating Ogden L. Mills with some 250,000 to spare.

Smith's regime as governor of New York was a model one, and he was hailed as a "liberal" leader by some of the very reform groups which formerly fought him as a party man. He advocated and forced passage of measures on adequate housing, improved factory laws, proper care of the insane, child welfare and state parks.

His fighting spirit manifest itself often in his action with the Republican majority which often dominated the state legislature, forcing passage of laws which he knew to be the public benefit.

One of the most famous political episodes of Smith's life was his historic battle with William G. McAdoo at the Democratic national convention in 1924.

Prohibition Foe

Smith, a life-long and ardent Roman Catholic, was also an outspoken opponent of prohibition. McAdoo was a Protestant and an avowed dry. When Smith was proposed as a possible candidate for president by the Democratic party that year the resultant struggle deadlocked the convention for nearly three weeks and required 103 ballots by the delegates before John W. Davis was named.

Despite his defeat in 1924, Smith emerged strong enough to be the leading contender for the nomination by the Democrats in 1928. At Houston, Texas, on June 28, his name was placed in nomination by Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was to be his successor as governor of New York and Democratic candidate for the presidency four years later.

When Smith left the governorship of New York state in 1928 to run for president on the Democratic ticket, he left the last public office which he was to hold, although he was mentioned often in later life as a possible candidate for many offices. If he was approached, he declined all offers.

Named At Houston

Smith was nominated on the first ballot in Houston, but the "Solid South" was predominantly dry while Smith's support elsewhere in the country was based to some extent on his record as an active opponent to prohibition. The campaign was a bitter one, too, as the issue of Smith's religion—Catholicism—was attacked by some elements of both parties. It was charged at the time that Smith, if elected, would dictate national policy on the basis of his religion.

With the party rent internally by dispute, Smith was defeated by the Republican candidate, Herbert C. Hoover.

Smith's campaign was a vigorous one, however, and although his defeat in electoral votes was crushing—444 to 87—he piled up

IN A STRANGE TALE of the war, Lt. David Stanley Crockett of Indianapolis (Davey Crockett to his pals), accepted the surrender of 500 Germans after he had been taken prisoner by them after being out of his Navy carrier-based Grumman Hellcat in southern France. Crockett, with 23 other prisoners of war, underwent an Allied bombing at the Toulon arsenal and then, after it was over, the Nazi commander of the arsenal summoned him to his quarters, untrapped his gun and said that he was surrendering and ordering his men to do so, too. Crockett accepted the surrender and French Forces of the Interior later marched the 500 Germans away.

a comforting popular vote—21,943,528 for Hoover to 15,430,718 for Smith.

The 1932 convention found the Democrats much improved in strength and supporters of Smith again endeavored to engineer the nomination of their candidate. Forces behind Franklin D. Roosevelt were too strong, however, and the man who had succeeded Smith as New York's governor was successfully nominated and subsequently elected.

Breaks With F. D. R.

During the President's first term, Smith's advice was often sought and always freely given. In 1936, though, he broke with Mr. Roosevelt reportedly over New Deal monetary policies. The break between Smith and Roosevelt was never healed, but he did not actively oppose the President after 1936, when he headed a group of prominent business men and other leaders, most of them normally Democrats, who opposed Mr. Roosevelt's re-election.

After 1932 he gave his time unstintingly to public causes and during the darkest days of the depression worked especially in relief for the unemployed. As president of the Empire State Building Corp., Smith maintained offices in the world's tallest building until his death.

His record on tolerance for all races and religions was outstanding and one of the last public press conferences he held was to issue a statement urging the Allied governments to do something to relieve the plight of Jews trapped by the Nazis in Europe.

At the time, however, he showed the effect which the death of his revered wife had left on him, and those close to Smith said it was a blow from which he never recovered. She died May 4 after a brief illness.

His five children survive him. They are Capt. Alfred E. Jr., now with the Army in the South Pacific; Mrs. J. A. Warner; Mrs. Francis J. Quinlan, Arthur and Walter.

Smith first entered the hospital Aug. 4, during a protracted heat wave which left him dangerously weakened. Later he was transferred to the Rockefeller Institute where he was given the last rites by the auxiliary bishop of New York, Francis J. McIntyre.

northwest, southwest and northeast corners and were blasting the center from three directions with the southeast corner and a satellite fort outside the most-known as Fort Moselle—firing back intensely.

Truce Declared

Fighting at the embattled French fort of Dunkerque was halted early today under the terms of a truce to facilitate evacuation of civilians from the beleaguered city.

Frontline dispatches reported that the truce, which is similar to that under which the civilian populace of Calais was evacuated, will last for 48 hours.

After the civilians had been moved from Calais, a heavy bombardment forced the German garrison to surrender in a matter of hours.

In Italy, American Fifth Army forces hammered out new gains along a wide front near the center of the Italian line, surging forward through heavy mud and beating back desperate German counter action.

Yank forward elements on the main road to Bologna advanced two miles nearer that cathedral city, seizing the towns of San Benedetto and San Andrea 14 miles from the city.

Take Vital Heights

American units occupying the vital heights at Mount Battaglia hurled back what appeared to be the last in a series of desperate Nazi counter-assaults attempting to regain control of the strategic position.

On the Adriatic flank of the line heavy rains which flooded the Fiumicino river limited British Eighth Army units to patrol activity.

In the eastern front Russian forces slashed 48 miles beyond previously reported positions to take the Yugoslav rail center of Petrograd, within 38 miles of Belgrade, and sever one rail enroute for Nazis fighting near the Yugoslav capital.

Soviet forces stand within 27 miles of the vital junction of the Belgrade-Munich and Belgrade-Budapest railroads. Seizure of this junction would separate Nazi forces in Yugoslavia and Hungary.

In the Pacific, Gen. Douglas MacArthur revealed that a force of more than 60 liberator bombers, operating from new advance bases, had struck a telling blow against Japan by lashing the vital Jap oil storage installations at Balikpapan, in Borneo.

Flying a long, arduous mission, the Liberators bored through headwinds and continued bad weather to hurl 74 tons of high explosives on the Japs' 3,000,000 barrel oil depot, seriously curtailing Jap power in the Southwest Pacific area by destroying much lubricating oil and aviation gasoline.

Other U. S. planes hammered Jap shipping, airports, and ground installations throughout the Celebes, Moluccas and Solomons.

In the Philippines a single heavy patrol bomber making a surprise attack on Zamboanga racked up a total of 11 enemy planes destroyed or damaged and a fuel-laden coastal vessel sunk.

LAST GASP JAPS BEING SNUFFED OUT IN PALAUS

PEARL HARBOR, Oct. 4—Fanciful, last gasp Japanese resistance was being snuffed out today by victorious American Marines and Army forces on Peleliu and Anguar islands in the Palau group.

Final enemy opposition on Peleliu was being encountered at Bloody Nose ridge where United States fighting men made continued progress Sunday and Monday in the grim and difficult task of routing Jap forces from "nearly inaccessible" caves, according to the latest news release issued by Pacific fleet headquarters.

Ground operations on adjacent Anguar island were in the "mopping up" stage with the Americans virtually in complete control. Sunday night, a single Jap bomber dropped two bombs harmlessly in a swamp near the Peleliu airfield.

Fleet headquarters announced also that Seventh Army air force Liberators struck again Sunday at Japan's bypassed Truk naval base in the Carolines, dropping thirty-one tons of explosives on the Dublon airfield.

Two Liberators were damaged by moderate antiaircraft fire and only two Jap fighters attempted interception.

TRUCE PERMITS CIVILIANS TO QUIT DUNKERQUE

LONDON, Oct. 4—Fighting in the embattled French port of Dunkerque was halted at 6 a. m. today under terms of a truce to facilitate evacuation of civilians.

A Reuter correspondent with Canadian troops attacking Dunkerque said the truce went into effect at 6 a. m. and will last 48 hours.

The arrangement of a truce with the German garrison defending Dunkerque, reported previously by the DNE agency, was similar to that under which civilians were removed from Calais. Once civilians were removed from Calais a terrific Allied bombardment forced the Germans there to capitulate within a few hours.

condensed stories of the brawl, which took place on the night of Sept. 23, shortly after President Roosevelt had left Washington's swank Statler hotel where he had delivered his first "political" speech of the presidential campaign.

Among those advocating an investigation of the incident, was Rep. John M. Rankin (D) Miss., chairman of the house committee on veterans' legislation, who declared:

"The incident should be thoroughly investigated in order to place responsibility where it belongs."

Officers Involved

The two naval officers involved in the fight, Lt. Randolph Dickens, Jr., a "battle fatigue" patient at Bethesda Hospital, and Lt. Comdr. James H. Suddeth, both told identical stories that the fight broke out after teamsters had tried to question them on how they were going to vote and had charged them with being "disloyal" to their service and to their commander-in-chief.

Rep. Cox (D) Ga., castigated the teamsters involved in the altercation as "goons" and "outlaws."

"Certainly, men in the armed services should be immune from assaults by goons," Cox declared vehemently. "It is especially unfortunate that these goons sought out decorated members of the armed forces, home from the fighting fronts, and attempted to beat them up for no other reason than that they respectfully refused to submit to the indignities of his aggregation of outlaws."

Asks Information

Rep. Karl Mundt (R) S. D., also called for full information to be supplied by the Navy to its personnel outside the United States.

Alluding to the Navy's determination that the news was "political," Mundt declared:

"The political implications, if any, grow out of the administration's attempt to keep the facts themselves. If a couple of union leaders undertake to 'beat up' a United States Navy man, it makes news, and it should be told."

Sen. Kenneth Wherry (R) Neb., said: "If any partisan or group from my party or any other political party or organization attacks members of the armed forces, especially those hospitalized, as is alleged, certainly the Navy should go to the bottom of it. These partisans should be cleared if innocent and if guilty they should be punished."

Sen. Burton (R) Ohio commented: "The incident is unfortunate, but it carries a timely reminder that servicemen are entitled to complete freedom in their political views, and that they propose to defend that freedom at home as well as abroad. Our servicemen generally can be depended on to respect carefully the rights of others and they are entitled to equal respect from all others."

NEW YORK—Writers of books recently banned in Boston probably will face the censors were like Gov. Leverett Saltonstall, of Mass. Asked at a recent New York press conference for comment on the Boston book ban, the Governor said: "A fellow in politics doesn't get time to read them anyway."

STEPHEN HENRY, NATIVE OF CITY, DIES IN WEST

Stephen Henry, 73, a native of Circleville, died in Hollywood, Cal., Tuesday at 9 a. m. His death was sudden, following a heart attack. Mr. Henry left Circleville 15 years ago for California to act as coast correspondent for "The Billboard." He did publicity work for Tom Mix, Ken Maynard and Joe E. Brown. At the time of his death, he was chief investigator for the OPA in Hollywood.

Mr. Henry was born in Circleville on July 23, 1871, and was the son of John and Margaret Henry. He was a veteran of the Spanish-American war.

Mr. Henry is survived by his widow, Mrs. Etna Henry, and two children, Mrs. Velma Tetzlaff, and Eliot Henry; two grandchildren; three sisters, Mrs. Marie Abernethy, Columbus; Mrs. Margaret Harner, Xenia, and Zelma, Mrs. Frank J. Adams, Jr., of Baltimore, Md.; two brothers, Eliot Henry, of Circleville and Columbus, and Donald Henry, of St. Louis.

Funeral services in Hollywood will be Friday at 9 a. m. at St. Patrick's Catholic church with burial in Holy Angels cemetery of that city.

Reduction of personal income tax rates to prevent a slowing up of recovery after the war.

Changing and reduction of the income tax on incorporated businesses to the point where it "no longer acts as a drag on production and a barrier to jobs."

Elimination, after the war, of the special war-time taxes "which now rise to 95 percent" and which are "almost confiscation."

Scraping of all excise taxes, as soon as possible, except those on alcoholic beverages, tobacco and gasoline.

Overhauling of existing tax laws and creation of a simple and generally stable basic tax law.

Establishment of a consistent, national tax policy directed toward achieving full employment, rising national income, national solvency and ultimate reduction of the national debt.

"It is far better," said Gov. Dewey, "to have a low tax rate with a national income of 150 billion dollars, than a high tax rate with a national income of 76 billion dollars, as we had under the New Deal at its peak time."

Gov. Dewey's talk on taxes, the eighth speech he has made in this campaign, preceded by four days his Saturday night speech at Charleston, West Virginia.

mobilization to cover demobilization activities, Mr. Roosevelt asserted that it did not deal adequately with the demobilization of civilian war workers, their re-employment in peacetime pursuits and appropriate unemployment benefits during the transitional period.

The legislation setting up the surplus war property administration also drew the President's criticism. It provided for creation of a three-man surplus property board whereas the Baruch report had recommended placing the problem in the hands of an administrator with "full and final authority" so the greatest administrative flexibility could be achieved.

TOP NAZIS ON BRITAIN'S WAR CRIMINAL LIST

LONDON, Oct. 4—Prime Minister Winston Churchill declared emphatically today that Adolf Hitler, Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels and Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler are on Britain's list of war criminals.

Answering a question put to him in the house of commons by Geoffrey Mander, liberal member of parliament, on whether the German leaders were on the British and United Nations list of Axis war criminals, Churchill said:

"So far as the British list is concerned the parties mentioned are included. It should not be assumed that procedure of trial will be necessarily adopted. I am not in a position to make any statement about the United Nations' list at the present time."

TRUE REPORTING

A veteran newspaper man remembers the journalistic handling of the last war calls attention to a fact which should interest and reassure newspaper readers. "There is no faking in the reporting of this war," he says. "It is as accurate and honest as mortal reporters can make it. At least 20 American correspondents have been killed in this war trying to get the news where it was."

He recalls that none was killed in such procedure during the Spanish-American war. Doubtless correspondents were in quest of news then, too; but there is plenty of evidence that in those days they were less concerned with getting and recording the precise facts, at whatever cost. There is no such faking now as there was when, as Charles Michelson has admitted, he and a journalistic friend reported the Battle of Manila from a newspaper office in New York.

When a reporter nowadays turns in his copy, and when his editor prints it, whether it is a local police story or the report of a battle on the other side of the world, the reader can depend on it that, so far as the newspaper men are able to determine, it is true and dependable. And the reading public naturally senses this fact. It is very seldom now that a reader is heard saying, "Oh, that's just a newspaper story." He believes it because it is printed in his paper, and he has found that, although occasional mistakes may occur, his paper does not knowingly tell him anything that isn't so.

SOLDIERS BUYING HOMES

"THE return of the people in the armed forces to this country is the most important influence in the residential real estate market that you or I will witness in our lifetime," said a Savings and Loan banker to a group of realtors the other day. "It challenges realtors with the greatest opportunity for worth while service in their entire experience."

"Very soon GI Joes in large numbers will be returning every month. Of these, 2 per cent are under 25, many will temporarily remain single and return to school. They will come later into the great post-war residential market."

Servicemen living in barracks, tents, foxholes, long for homes of their own, for privacy and stability. Young wives, working outside and living at home while Grandma cares for the baby, or living in their old homes while Grandma works outside, are eager for homes of their own, also. The demand for small and pleasant homes will, doubtless, at first far exceed the supply.

Those fool Nazis don't seem to know when they've been licked.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

LASKER NOW DESERTS TO ROOSEVELT

LOWVILLE, N. Y.—High-up Republicans aren't saying anything about it, but they are sore as blazes at Albert Lasker, for deserting to Roosevelt.

Lasker, former head of one of the top advertising firms in the United States, was one of the managers of Warren Harding's campaign in 1920 and, as a reward, was made chairman of the Shipping Board. He three times voted against Roosevelt. This time, however, he says he will vote for Roosevelt.

JAPS MOVE TO CHINA

It is no longer a military secret that the war in the Central Pacific is five to six months ahead of schedule. Guam and Saipan were not supposed to be taken until sometime next year. Also the bombing of the Philippines is several months ahead of the time table.

However, along with this news are some distressing facts about China, which nobody wants to shout about.

One is that the Japs are transporting more and more machinery to China and digging in there for a long war. Apparently they figure that the Japanese homeland is in for steady bombing and eventual occupation, so they are transferring things to the mainland of China.

China, they know better than almost anyone else, is a quagmire when any outside country tries to invade it, so it might take years for the British, American and Russian armies to root the Japs out, provided they themselves can get sufficiently entrenched.

Another discouraging factor is that we have engaged only a small part of the Jap Army in the South Pacific, leaving untouched vast reserves which the Japs have been keeping at home and in China.

Finally, Chiang Kai-shek's prestige is increasingly on the wane inside China. He has been the chief exponent of cooperation with the U. S. A., but recently his anti-U. S. war lords have been getting the upper hand. We have to face the fact that some of them would even prefer to work with the Japs than have their territory fought over by Allied armies. It doesn't make a happy picture.

NOTE—On the other hand, the Jap fleet has taken so many reverses that they scarcely dare return home.

YANKEE INGENUITY

Prime Minister Churchill paid tribute in Parliament to the terrific job the U. S. Army in landing more than 1,000,000 men since D-Day and moving of hundreds of millions of tons of guns, food, munitions up from the beaches into the front lines. However, the real inside story of this supply miracle has not yet been told.

The ingenuity of U. S. supply officers in contriving temporary docks staggers civilian imagination.

One way of landing supplies was to drive fully loaded Liberty ships right on to the beaches and deliberately turn them over on their sides, with the sterns extending into the water.

After these Liberty ships were run around, G. I.'s built platforms on their sides, making simulated temporary piers. Other ships then docked alongside them.

Another impressive device still being used by supply troops are hundreds of hastily constructed railroad barges strung end to end from the beaches out to sea,

Infant Feeding by Formula

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

MODERN IDEAS about infant feeding have become much simplified from the time not so long ago when "preparing a formula" was supposed to require the combined services of a higher mathematician, an organic chemist and an expert pharmacist.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

One ancient principle, however, still retains its supremacy. There is no adequate substitute for mother's milk in the first few weeks or months of life. Mother's milk was made for human infants—that profound thought is not original with me—designed for their digestion and nutrition and suits them more perfectly than any other food. Every infant deserves and has the right to expect it will be nourished by mother's milk at the beginning of its life. Nothing else gives it quite such a good start.

But it need not be kept up as long as we used to believe. As I say, we have learned so much about artificial infant feeding that it is now not only thoroughly scientific but very much simplified.

Manufactured Infant Foods

There are plenty of manufactured infant foods that can be purchased and except those that have too much sugar and give the baby a false look of health by making it fat, they are all quite healthy and proper. Some babies have the sort of digestion that can handle only one of these special formulas.

But for practical purposes cow's milk is the best, cheapest and most available basis for substitute infant feeding.

Human milk and cow's milk have the same chemical composition, but the proportions of the essential nutrients are somewhat different. Cow's milk has about twice as much protein and about half as much sugar as mother's milk. The excess of protein doesn't make any difference. Excessive protein produces no symptoms in infants, although the older textbooks used to have long lists of the horrors which might be caused by too much protein in the infant's diet. An infant requires about 1½ grams of protein per pound per day and cow's milk contains this in 1½ ounces, so it is easy to calculate the required amount.

Amount of Sugar Needed

Sugar sufficient to bring cow's milk to the same content as mother's milk must be added. It does not make any difference what kind of sugar you use. Children's specialists have long since given up the idea that it has to be in form that is in mother's and cow's milk—lactose. You can use ordinary sugar out of the sugar bowl and the infant will digest it all right. But if your conscience feels better by having an exact imitation of mother's milk you can get lactose or maltose or dextrose at the grocery or drug store, or you can use cane sugar syrup.

The fat in mother's milk is somewhat more finely emulsified than in cow's milk, but this does not cause any digestive disturbances.

A formula then for an infant of average weight is:
Milk—12 ounces.
Added carbohydrate (sugar, syrup, lactose, dextrose or maltose) 1 ounce.

Water to make—18 ounces.
Since milk is deficient in Vitamin C and D some orange juice and cod liver oil must be given the infant daily.

And the milk should be bacteriologically clean—pasteurized or boiled.

Third Haven

by WARREN HOWARD

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

DR. DWIGHT RAYNOR had lost none of his directness or efficiency, or confidence in himself, since Anne had worked under him last. He went to Weston hospital with Dr. Banning and decided he would operate there the next day. There would be no need to go to Baltimore. So Mrs. Reynolds was moved in the ambulance and Anne went with her. The old lady bore the trip well and even said, "I won't say anything now, but as soon as I'm over the operation I want to know more about you and Dr. Raynor."

Anne nodded gravely. "I'll tell you everything then."

"And if I don't—"

"You will, Dr. Raynor, whatever his faults, is a great surgeon."

"And a very handsome man." The old eyes twinkled as she said it. Anne smiled because it was a return of the former indomitable spirit.

Dr. Banning was all eagerness to co-operate with his distinguished colleague, whom he appreciated at once. He asked Dr. Raynor to stay with him, but the surgeon shook his head and said, "I want to be where I can talk with Anne, who won't go on duty until operating time with me. Mrs. Reynolds said I might stay at her house."

It was an invitation which Laura also seconded, and Molly was bestirred by phone to do her very best. Laura only saw her mother after she was in the hospital, but her approval of all plans was immediate. This was scientific efficiency and she liked efficiency. She was very much impressed by Dr. Raynor, too. He was her idea exactly of what a great surgeon should be. She was really pleased when he accepted her invitation to stay at her house.

He said, "Naturally, I want to see as much as I can of Anne."

"You may consider yourself Anne's guest if you will," she answered cordially. "Our home is hers. She has been wonderful."

"And you didn't realize she was a highly skilled nurse?" He had been told by Dr. Banning and found that part of it highly amusing.

Laura smiled. "There is so much we don't know in a little place like this."

Laura came home to dinner before driving back to spend the evening at the hospital with her mother. She did her best to be entertaining and her best was very good indeed. Laura had a good brain and used it. She was really quite pleased with everything. An operation could not only put her mother back where she had been, but might do better than that. No miracles were to be expected, but when Dr. Raynor was hopeful she knew she had every reason to be. There was a chance of failure, of course, but it hardly entered her mind.

And Dr. Raynor was in love with Anne. Anne had been his special nurse. It put Anne in a new light in more ways than one. It made her understandable. It gave her a background. It accounted for that in her which had been a mainstay in trouble and also that calm assurance which had been most irritating. And it was clear now that, even if Anne had played with Russell, it had only been playing.

So Laura talked charmingly of books and people and small-town life. Dr. Raynor liked her as he liked all intelligent girls. He had no use for dull ones, no matter how beautiful. He was in his best mood, gracious, witty, sure of himself. And even Anne had to confess to herself she had never seen him look handsomer. He complimented Molly on her cooking and Molly, once back in the kitchen, danced with joy. As she told her friends later in her little house on a back street:

"It ain't only WHAT he said, but the WAY he said it. An' him the handsomest man ever poked his nose into this town. An' a great doctor, too. In New York all the society women just run after him and begs him to put 'em open'."

After dinner Russell came in and was introduced to Dr. Raynor. They made a fine picture as they shook hands, but the doctor was taller, broader of shoulder and handsomer. Russell was impressed, as no one could help being.

"Everyone has heard of you, Dr. Raynor," he said. "We're proud to have you with us."

Laura smiled. "We owe him as much as we owe Anne. She really brought him."

The doctor smiled. "For Anne I would go anywhere, any time. I've been in love with her for years, but she probably won't hear of it. She was hiding here to tease me."

There was a little laugh that wasn't too easy. Russell remembered that last day in the car. She had to go back to New York, she had said. He could understand now. She had said she was married—well, he didn't know. He stood, hat in hand, for a moment. Anne was very quiet, quieter than he had ever seen her. But was she quiet because she was happy? He didn't know. He was sure of Laura, however. Laura was radiant and looked handsomer than he had ever seen her. Yes, handsomer was the word. Laura would never be pretty. She was too dark, too intense. But to-night she was vital, triumphant. He spoke to her.

"I'm driving to Weston to see your mother, if it's allowed."

Dr. Raynor laughed. "I want you to see her. She spoke of you as being such a devoted friend. In fact, I gather you're engaged to—to Laura, aren't you?"

Russell hesitated, then bowed. "I thought so." He turned. "And you don't mind my presumption in calling you Laura? I like first names, real names. I call them—that is, except my own. Only Anne could ever say it and make music out of it."

Laura's eyes were bright. "I'm so proud if you call me Laura. And this is Russell, of course. We're only a small circle here."

"And a happy one, I'm sure."

"When you've given Mother back to us, we will be, Dr. Raynor."

"And if I fail?"

She looked into his eyes. "I'm sure you won't fail. Mother is very old—we celebrated her 80th birthday this spring—but she has an indomitable spirit. Also she'll tell you that people go on and on and don't die."

"Splendid. You tell her we are depending on her."

Laura thanked him, then turned to Russell. "Will you take me up with you?"

"Of course."

DUPLICATE DIFFERENT

ONE GREAT difference between bidding in match point duplicate and in rubber bridge comes when your opponents have a part score. Then the mathematics in favor of light fourth-hand openings must undergo alteration. It pays, in match point games, to open fourth-hand if you have about an average hand, with the majority of your strength in the major suits. But in rubber bridge, if the opponents have a partial, it is too likely to give them a cheap game.

By the time the 3-Clubs bid reached him, East saw he had already done some damage, as his opponents had a part score of 40 from the previous deal. He was afraid that if he bid again, the punishment might be too great. Actually, he would have been set if he opened his mouth, but at least he would have headed off the game which he had pre-

The spade 9 was opened, East putting in his J in the hope of later using his A to kill off the K. The Q went that, the diamond Q finesse worked, the club 10 was sent through to the Q, and West led the spade 4. East deciding to play his A and return the 3 in the hope that West could ruff. The dummy's K got this, the club 9, K and A followed, then the club J, and the diamond 4 was led. When the J went on, South played low from dummy, letting West win.

With only three tricks in, West saw that a diamond return would enable South to discard a heart on the diamond thirteenth, so cashed his heart A. But that was all, and South got the necessary 3-Clubs which gave his side a game, with his part score.

JUDGING by the lunar transits there should be a surprising and quite unpredictable turn in events, which may be considered progressive, productive and inspiring, a generally expansive and happy culmination toward the goal of cherished desires, hopes and wishes. Such should be worked for with considered judgment, good sense and reason as well as a prudent use of the intuition or "hunches" in financial matters or investment. But adhere to rules and regulations when traveling or forging ahead. Sign papers cautiously and preserve the amenities in social, and domestic affairs.

Those whose birthday it is are promised a very surprising turn for the better, with progress, success and splendid achievement in the way of attaining cherished ideals, goals and objectives. This applies to work, finance, business as well as romantic, social or domestic ambitions and aspirations. Sound sense as well as intuitive leads may be safely utilized, especially in big deals, speculation, travel and change, but precaution must be exercised, to keep within the code and preserve harmony in personal contacts. Push for high goals.

Those whose birthday it is are bounteously talented for success in business, finance, professions or arts, and should enjoy a happy life and possible inheritance.

Byrnes Eager to Retire
To Private Life Again

War Mobilizer Anxious To Resume Law Practice

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—The VE-Day collapse of Germany, not far around history's corner, probably will be followed by exodus from public life of War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes. Byrnes is known to be anxious to leave his key war job and depart for good from the government service in which he has spent most of his life.

Of course, the former supreme court justice and Senate Democratic "whip" is intensely loyal to President Roosevelt and will stay on as long as the president feels his presence is necessary. But Byrnes has no intention of being persuaded to head the war-to-peace agency set up by the George demobilization bill.

If he is compelled to do so by his conscience, Byrnes will stay in the saddle after Germany falls and until the defeat of Japan is in sight. But he would prefer not to.

Nor does the South Carolinian want reappointment to the high bench, from which he stepped to aid the war effort.

Byrnes' days in Congress, as one of the shrewdest statesmen in the history of the south, also definitely are behind him. And Byrnes still is smarting under the defeat handed him by Sidney Hillman in the Chicago Democratic convention.

Byrnes was an apparent presidential choice for the vice presidential nomination. But Hillman objected on grounds that he would be

"Home Changes" Discussed By
Mrs. Kennedy

The Child Conservation League met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Joseph W. Adkins, Jr., Northridge road, and heard an excellent paper titled, "The Home Changes With the World," presented by Mrs. Carl Kennedy.

Mrs. Theodore Huston, president, was in charge of the business hour during which plans were made for each league member to contribute a doll for the British War-Relief society. Mrs. Robert Hedges, Mrs. Melvin Kiger, Mrs. Sterling Lamb and Mrs. Virgil M. Cress, were announced as associate members of the league. Mrs. Enid Denham and Mrs. Lincoln S. Mader were received as active members.

In opening her paper, Mrs. Kennedy said: "In order to understand more fully just how the present-day homes have changed and are changing, we had best enumerate the qualities which constitute a good home in peace time. First of all, a home not only shelters a family from storm, but offers protection from loneliness and insecurity. It feeds, clothes and offers opportunities for re-creative experience.

"Many homes are unable to fill all these functions now and adjustments have had to be made. Perhaps the ways in which the home has changed most during the war are intangible ones.

"Wartime excitement is something whose total effect on children's nerves only time will disclose."

Mrs. Kennedy said also: "In spite of the many changes the war has brought to our way of living and our homes, there are many ways to build family unity. The attempt of the home to transfer its responsibilities to school, welfare groups and the church seems doomed to failure. These are essential allies, but not proxies.

"The most important job in the world is to help boys and girls to grow into happy, healthy, self-reliant human beings. If we try, we can bind together the members of our families and build a home that cannot be attacked by the failures of our times."

The second paper scheduled, "Nursery Schools in Wartime," by Mrs. Karl Mason, will be read at a later meeting.

Luther League

The October session of Luther league, held Tuesday in Trinity Lutheran parish house, opened with singing, followed by devotionals in charge of the Rev. George L. Troutman. Miss Mary Louise Beck presented the topic, "Come and Worship in Groups."

Miss Mildred and Miss Mary Wolf were named co-chairmen of the food committee comprised of Miss Mabel Cline, Mrs. Samuel Cline, Miss Doris Schreiner, Mrs. Gladden Troutman and Miss Mary Wolford. Miss Barbara Green, Paul Helwagen, Gladden Troutman and Ned Dresbach will be in charge of the program. Miss Ruth Melvin will be chairman of the dining room committee, her assistants including Miss Christine Schreiner, Miss Jean Trimmer, Robert Wilkinson, Paul and Carl Ott, Miss Ruth Cunningham, Ned and Miss Marilyn Barthelmas and Ned Schreiner.

Indoor football comprised the entertainment for the evening.

The meeting was concluded with lunch served by Miss Eleanor Wolford and her committee, Walter Melvin, Robert Wilkinson, Miss Rebecca Skinner, Miss Carrie Arledge, Miss Betty Wright and Miss Virginia McClain.

Benzenberg-Alkire Nuptials

Miss Viola May Alkire, daughter of Mrs. Fairy Alkire, Kingston, became the bride of Lieutenant (j. g.) Henry C. Benzenberg, Jr., of the medical corps, U. S. N. R., at a lovely wedding September 23 in the St. Paul Lutheran church, West Englewood, N. J. The Rev. Albert Stauderman officiated at the service at 4 p. m.

The ceremony was preceded by a program of nuptial music by A. R. Ramsden, church organist, who played also the wedding marches.

For the occasion, the church altar was beautifully decorated with arrangements of white gladioli and chrysanthemums and banked with fish-tail palms. Candles in seven-branch candelabra cast a soft glow over the bridal party.

For her wedding the bride chose a wedding gown of traditional white, Gros-de-Londre taffeta, fashioned with a long waist, sweetheart neckline and bouffant skirt. Her fingertip veil of net and lace fell from a seed-pearl tiara. She wore white lace mitts. For something old, the bride wore her great-grandmother's wedding ring tied at her wrist. Mrs. George Emerson, her great-grandmother, had worn the ring 75 years ago. Miss Alkire, who was given in marriage by her mother, carried a white prayer book with a white orchid on the cover.

Mrs. Carl Woods, Canton, Ohio, wore a blue taffeta, floor-length gown, styled with sweetheart neckline, as she served as matron of honor. She wore a matching Juliet cap and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Lieutenant (j. g.) Donald A. Heintz, U. S. N. R., Buffalo, New York, was best man.

Mrs. Alkire, mother of the bride, was gown in a black, floor-length frock, trimmed with steel beads. Her accessories were black and she wore an orchid pinned at her shoulder.

Immediately after the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Benzenberg, parents of the bridegroom, entertained at a reception at their home, 1162 Julia street, West Englewood, N. J. Mrs. Benzenberg wore a long frock of aqua crepe as she received her guests. Her outfit included pink accessories and she wore a tiny nosegay of pink roses in her hair.

Lieut. Benzenberg and his bride spent a short honeymoon at the Ambassador Hotel, New York City, and at Ocean Grove, N. J.

The new Mrs. Benzenberg is a graduate of Pickaway township high school, attended the Stella Becker School of Dancing in Columbus and continued her dancing studies in New York City. She is now a member of the Rockettes of the Radio City Music Hall.

UNUSUAL SERIES GETS UNDERWAY

Baseball 'Nobodies' Meet Champion Cardinals In One-Park Series

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 4.—At once the strangest and most intriguing of all World Series liaisons is to be consummated at Sportsman's park this afternoon, the occasion being the opening game of baseball's 1944 extravaganza between the St. Louis Cardinals, a champion often, and the St. Louis Browns, a competitive nobody whose emotional appeal is great, and whose ownership is that of the town's leading money lender.

The Browns have never been in a World Series before. They've never, until this year, won a modern pennant.

But they're a team that seems to have been touched with the magic of destiny; to a point in fact, where seemingly they could not lose because (even when given every chance) they simply would not. But the sharp, well-advised money is saying they'll lose now.

It is saying this at odds of 1-2 on the Cardinals to take the series and 11-20 to take the first game, though the sympathy of the town and the nation as well must ride with the Browns all the way. That's strictly maudlin, underdog stuff, of course, for they're the "poor relation" of baseball in the matter of recognized talent, the "nothing" team that suddenly became something rather special as much probably to its own surprise as anybody else's.

Moreover, when they had to win on the final day of the season, they did. But this time it may not be so simple.

However, the main change around here, overnight, was the influx of visitors, presumably from within the 100-mile limit as laid down by the ODT. Hotels were glutted, the restaurants ran queues out to the sidewalks and, for parties who came in here without accommodations, there was always the linen closet or an extra bench in Forest park.

Meanwhile, local vehicles were fitting their passengers to the framework and charging rates that seemed to be determined at whim and pleasure.

In other words, this was quite the customary World Series all-St. Louis or semi-St. Louis and war, or no war.

CALIFORNIA RACES SET

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 4.—Preparations for the return of horse racing to Southern California for the first time since America's entry into the war proceeded at full speed at Hollywood park today. The last obstacle to restoration of the turf sport in this area was cleared Tuesday when the War Manpower Commission granted the club an employment ceiling.

PLAYOFF ALL EVEN

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 4.—The International League final playoff series between Newark and Baltimore has all even today at three games apiece after Baltimore punched out a 5-3 victory last night with a late-inning burst of home runs.

THIRD WARTIME WORLD SERIES STARTS TODAY.

Cooper And Galehouse Hill Rivals For First Game Of All-St. Louis Classic

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 4.—Mort Cooper, of the Cardinals, one of the outstanding pitchers of these times, and Denny Galehouse, of the Browns, an oft-traded wanderer of little renown, opposed each other this afternoon as the two St. Louis clubs tangled before a capacity crowd in the third World Series to be conducted in World War II.

Cooper, a 22-game winner and veteran of the Cards' World Series appearances last year and the year before, was Manager Billy Southworth's logical choice, but Galehouse was strictly a surprise package on the part of Manager Luke Sewell who said simply but confidently, "he's my man," as he pointed to the side-arming right-hander.

Galehouse won only nine games and lost 10 this season and, moreover, blew the two lost by the Browns in the streak of 11 wins in 13 games at the finish of the campaign. However, observers insisted he was and is a better pitcher than his record, and the natives of St. Louis were quite happy about it all. They couldn't lose this series.

No notable lineup changes were announced for either side, nothing untoward occurred in the last few hours before they tangled and the first all-St. Louis World Series seemed destined to be run-of-the-mill but nonetheless they're betting even without the presence of great standard performers usually found in these classics. The war removed most of the big names from the baseball rosters and it was the residue of 4-F's and over-age gents who began to contest this one today.

RADIO NEWS NOTES

In order to remain topical, America's Town Meeting of the Air "continues to be flexible, with the latest indication of that flexibility a change in the question for broadcast Thursday. Originally, the topic was "Should the Allies Retain Germany?" Then, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morath, Jr., brought forward his plan for breaking up Germany's heavy industry and making it an agricultural nation. Accordingly, the discussion topic was altered, so that now, the speakers will discuss the merits of Secretary Morath's proposal, arguing the pros and cons of the question, should the Allies Change Germany from an Industrial to an Agricultural Nation?"

Sammy Weiss, perhaps the best swing drummer in radio, will be featured in a Raymond Paige arrangement of "Beat That Drum," the Broadway hit, "Carmen Jones," on "Stage Door Canteen" today. This is a repeat performance for Weiss, who was heard doing the number on the Sept. 8 broadcast which was followed by requests for a repeat.

One of the all-time favorites among cowboy ballads is being featured in the range, "Tumbling Tumblebuns." This melody was written by Bob Nolan, who heads the ranks of the Pioneers' musical troupe featured on Andy Devine's "Randy Roubid-Up" Saturday evenings.

When Young, it shouldn't surprise you to hear, received many requests for sprinting while he was at school. Considering the extra time in which the youthful champion has raced ahead to radio time, it seems singularly appropriate.

When Dunninger, the famed Mentalist, makes his trek to the west coast during the coming weeks, he is due for several appearances with movie moguls. R.D. has turned down numerous contracts for picture appearances because no producer has, as yet, shown a way in which to diminish his extraordinary talent of thought reading and projection.

COUNCIL ACTS ON STRUCTURE OVER HARGUS CREEK

Sewer Difficulties In South End Also Given Official Attention

City council passed one ordinance, started action to correct sewer difficulties in the south end of the city and took steps to get under way the bridge project over Hargus creek into Ted Lewis park, at its meeting Tuesday night.

Passed under suspension of rules was an ordinance appropriating $200 for payment of insurance premiums on various public buildings. Service Director Clarence Helvering explained the additional appropriation was necessary because premiums were higher this year than estimated.

Fred Clark asked council to contact the N. & W. railroad to see if it was possible to secure a strip of their property for an approach to the bridge which the state highway department has agreed to build at the north end of Scoto street. After considerable discussion by members Councilman J. D. Mason moved, seconded by Councilman Ray Anderson, that the railroad be contacted.

Complaints Sounded

Kenneth Baldwin of Town street complained that his basement has been flooded and that sewer water backs up into his kitchen sink. He said that his washing machine had been ruined. Councilmen reported that other complaints had been received from residents of that street and that several could not flush toilets because of the pressure in the sanitary sewer. Roy Hawkes, superintendent of the disposal plant, stated that pumpkins, seeds and other waste from the Winn-Orr canning company were causing trouble at the sewage plant.

After much discussion the service director was instructed to notify the Winnor canning company to stop at once dumping industrial waste into the sanitary sewer. If these wastes are eliminated the sewer troubles on Town street and disposal troubles will be corrected, councilmen stated.

Check Ordered

The service director was also instructed to check up on a sewer in the south end which is not in use.

Mr. Hawkes also told council that new coils and piping were necessary at the disposal plant. He said repairs would be expensive because of the danger to the workers installing them from gases which accumulate in the storage tanks.

Mayor Ben Gordon reported that during the month of September his office had collected $5 in fines and $155 in bonds, which had been deposited in city funds. The $5 was earmarked for street repair because it was collected in a state patrol case.

AIR FORCE FILMS

Busiest studio in Hollywood today is the First Motion Picture Unit, Army Air Forces.

Among other things, it is producing films teaching airmen how to fend for themselves when they bail out or are forced down in rough country. Crews from the Air Forces studio are even sent to the Panama jungles to prepare film material showing airmen how to deal with snakes, jungle swamps, jungle food possibilities, poison plants and first aid.

For a long time this has been taught airmen in classrooms and in the field. However, the Army has discovered that this past training is useless if a soldier becomes panicky while landing. Seeing the situation on the screen, therefore, helps him if he is forced down on the water, in the desert or jungle, for the visual impression is stronger than the memory of lectures.

Another important film subject is first aid for members of bombing crews while they are in the air. Finally, the Air Forces studio is turning out rehabilitation films showing airmen who have lost a limb how they may return to civilian life. Army men hope permanently disabled airmen.
